I'd say review selectively and ask for more time. We should ask them to explain how these (piecemeal) reviews fit into the overall longer schedule that Karla outlined yesterday. I will try to get to the 3:30 meeting Lisa scheduled today, but had scheduled late lunch break 3:00-4:00. Tim is on leave. Not sure about Erin's availability as she has a PT schedule and usually doesn't past mid-afternoon. I imagine Stephanie will know better.

I got a very legitimate question from Stephanie about her (and I assume Erin's) review of the BDCP. We now have over 4,000 pages in house for review – with like a one week turn around. Staff are asking should they give a shallow review of as much as they can digest, due a deeper dive on a few things, or not worry about the deadline. What do you think? I have some time with Jared tomorrow, I might ask him. Also, encourage to see the invite – I guess we have been invited to the inner sanctum. Maybe we raise it then?
